Paras. 7(a) and (b), 11(a) and (b), and 12 (a) and (b), LM-30;

7(a) and (b):

In 2003, the Commissioner of Baseball established the Commission on the 21st Century in Baseball, and I am a member of the commission. In 2004, the Commissioner conducted two meetings, in which members of the Commission were given (a) lunch at the meeting site, and (b) a memento of the meeting. Major League Baseball (MLB) reports that the combined value of the two lunches was approximately $177.50, and the combined value of the two mementoes was $415.50. I do not recall whether I stayed for either lunch. I did not accept or use one memento, a hotel gift basket valued by MLB at $150.00, and believe I gave the second, a clock valued by MLB at 265.50, to a secretary in our office. Typical commission meetings were attended by approximately 20 members and 10 support staff. The lunches were available to all attendees; the mementoes were available only to members.

11(a) and (b):

Mr. Fehr is outside counsel to the Association and, in that capacity, could arguably be viewed as a business which does, on behalf of the Association, a substantial amount of business with MLB. I do not know the portion of compensation paid by the Association to Mr. Fehr that should be attributed to his dealings with MLB, as opposed to other entities with whom he conducts business on behalf of the Association.

12(a) and (b):

In 2004, Mr. Fehr gave me a book, Alexander Hamilton. I do not know what he paid for it, but the cover price is $35.00.
